The aim of this study was to examine the relationship between periodontitis, its clinical parameters, and genetic polymorphisms of the TLR4 gene, and persistence of Porphyromonas gingivalis (P. gingivalis) within the periodontal pocket. Genomic DNA was obtained from 50 unrelated periodontitis patients and 37 controls. The presence of a P. gingivalis variant (TLR4 Ile753Phe) and two TLR4 polymorphisms (C-819T and T+896A) was determined by restriction fragment length polymorphism analysis. All patients were examined clinically to determine probing depth, attachment loss, and bleeding on probing. All periodontitis patients harbored P. gingivalis, and 36% of them were colonized with the variant TLR4 Ile753Phe strain, while only 9.5% of controls carried this strain. There was a significant association between presence of the variant TLR4 Ile753Phe and increased probing depth and bleeding on probing (P = 0.02), but not with attachment loss. The presence of the variant TLR4 Ile753Phe significantly increased the risk of harbouring P. gingivalis (P = 0.004). Although patients with P. gingivalis harbouring the variant TLR4 Ile753Phe tended to have increased probing depth and increased bleeding on probing, this association did not reach statistical significance (P = 0.07 and P = 0.09, respectively). The results suggest that the variant TLR4 Ile753Phe may be a risk factor for the persistence of P. gingivalis within the periodontal pocket. FILED
