CR2 Converter (Latest)

Raw converter is very simple to use. You only need to select the files that you need to convert, and the application does the rest. After conversion is complete, you will find all your files in the output folder that was specified. Conversion is fast and simple. There is no need to download any additional programs or plug-ins, and installation is very easy. The list of supported formats is quite large, and the output images are of great quality. There are some bugs, though. The program has an outdated and basic interface. To use it effectively, you will have to spend a few minutes getting familiar with the functions available in the program. The tools provided by CR2 Converter are limited. The only way to edit the settings of a raw photo is to export it to a new photo file. You cannot add any filters, nor can you adjust the size or brightness of the images. Our tests reveal that the output images are of great quality. We strongly recommend this application if you need to convert a few digital photographs or create a new image format using the raw files created by Canon Inc.

Q: Is it possible to force objects to be serialized as JSON? I'm trying to write a protocol specification. In that specification I want to define a set of objects that will be serialized in a JSON-like format. Since JSON is a generic format it is possible that other formats will use the same serialization API. This is why I want to be able to force objects to be serialized in that format. Is it possible to do so?

I thought of doing something like this: [Version("1.0")]
public sealed class MySerializer : IObjectSerializer { [OnSerializing] public void Serialize(JsonWriter writer, object obj) { // If serialize to JSON
writer.Write(JsonTextWriter.WriteObjectValue(obj)); } [OnSerialized] public void Deserialize(JsonReader reader, object obj) { // If serialize to JSON reader.Read(JsonTextWriter.ReadObjectValue(obj)); } } But
